

NANCY WYNNE EXPATRIATES ON MUSIC CONFERENCE TO BE HELD MONDAY

National Association of Music School Societies to Hold Annual Session in Auditorium of Curtis Publishing Company in Coming Week

Most interesting will be the fourth conference of the National Association of Music School Societies which will be held on Monday and Tuesday of next week in the large auditorium of the Curtis Publishing Company on Independence square.

The officers of the National Association include Mrs. Howard Mansfield, of New York, who is president and a most ardent worker for the cause; Mr. Johan Grolle, of this city, is vice president, and Mr. Ellwood Hendrick, of New York, is secretary and treasurer.

The other officers of the committee include Mr. David Mannes and Miss Marian Clark Smith, of New York; Mrs. Samuel F. Clegg, of this city; Dr. Daniel Bloomfield and Miss Annie Endicott Nourse, of Boston, and Mrs. Anne Glibreth Cross, of Providence.

The object of the Association is to standardize the musical instruction of native and foreign-born children of the wage-earning classes and to use the influence of music for the development of a means for self-expression and good citizenship.

The whole of Monday will be given to business meetings and the reading of various papers by delegates from different cities. The program for the morning will be as follows:

10:30, Opening address by the vice president, Mr. Johan Grolle, "The National Association."

Papers by delegates: "The Value of Music as a Means of Development," Miss Elizabeth Paine, Music School Settlement, N. Y.

"The Relation of Eurhythmics to the Music School Settlements," Miss Emily McCallip, Settlement Music School, Philadelphia.

"Bronx House," Mr. Edgar Stowell, Bronx House, New York.

"Singing Individually and in Classes," Mrs. Catherine Saunders, South End Music School, Boston, Mass.

"The Music School in the Settlement as a Neighborhood Influence," Mr. Jacques Gottlieb, East Side House Settlement, New York.

Amendment to constitution. Election of National Committee.

After an adjournment, during which luncheon will be served for the delegates and invited guests, the afternoon session will open at 2 o'clock with a business meeting and an address by Mr. David Mannes, of New York, will be made. The rest of the program will be:

"The Future of Music for the People," Mr. Arthur Farwell, director Music School Settlement, New York.

"A Renaissance in Musical Education," Mr. James Francis Cook, president Philadelphia Music Teachers' Association.

"Duties of the Music School Settlement," Mrs. A. Lincoln Fienes, Boston Music School Settlement, Boston, Mass.

"Co-operation of Public Schools with Music Schools," Miss Elizabeth Fyffe, West Newton, Mass.

"The New Piano Teaching," Mrs. Harriet Seymour, Music School Settlement, New York.

"Our Experiments in Ensemble," Miss Franc Deizell, Brooklyn Music School Settlement, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Round table discussion.

In the evening the children of the Settlement Music School here will show the delegates and invited guests what the school has done for them by giving a musicale at the home of the president, Mrs. Samuel S. Fels, at the southeast corner of 89th and Walnut streets.

On Tuesday morning will be held a business meeting of the National Committee and delegates at the Settlement Music School, 427 Christian street. Luncheon will be served there under the charge of Mrs. Edward W. Bok, and then the visitors will inspect the new building of the school at 416-428 Queen street.

The convention will end with a visit to the Civic Exposition to which the guests will be conveyed by motors, which have been procured by some of the girls who are interested in the Music School Societies. Altogether it will be most entertaining.

The Home for Incubables will be aided today by a lawn fete which will be given on grounds of Mrs. Theodor L. Crane's country home at 6444 Greene street, Germantown.

There will be all the usual features for these out-of-door affairs, "cats" and games and rides and a tinker's wagon and goose farm. And all the workers and their sides are so greatly interested it is sure to be a success.

A most amusing little incident which occurred at the recent Flower Market in "the square" is really too good to miss, even if it does give one's masculine friends a chance to reiterate, "Isn't that just like a woman?"

It seems that the youngest of several charming sisters, after extracting solemn promises of secrecy from each one, told them of her engagement to a certain good-looking young Yale graduate of this city. They had suspected it for weeks past, but that does not matter. So off she flew the big sister to purchase an engagement present, after which, light of heart and still lighter of purse, she wandered up to the Flower Market and was urgently requested by yet another sister—and I have said, there are several of them—and her friends to buy "just a small posy—only a dollar."

"Not a chance," declared she, nonchalantly. "I'm dead broke, not a cent left, just bought the best looking engagement present for O—"

A petrified stare from her sister and shrieks of laughter, accompanied by a shower of questions from the friends, brought her back to earth with a crash, and with tears in her eyes she implored them not to give the secret away, and they consented.

And the cat is out of the bag now, I hear, and the engagement is to be announced tomorrow.
